

Some Varied Views of Women's Activities and News Features Glimpsed by the Camera

©International Film Service.

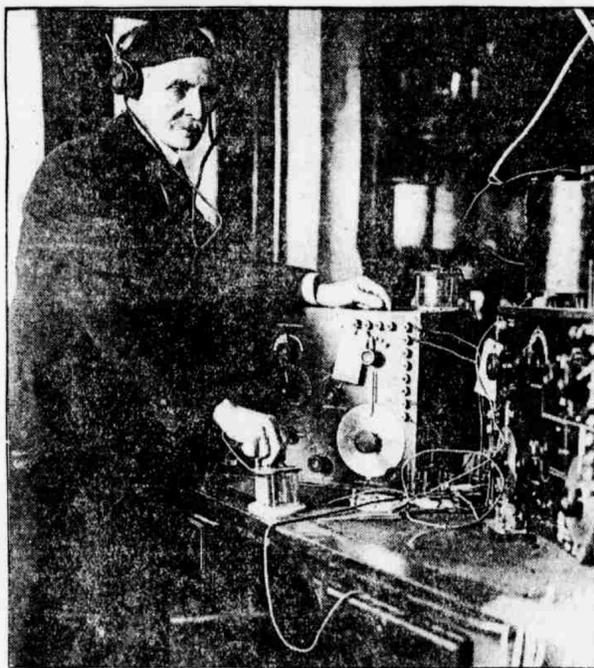

MANY ARE ASKING if women will hold their war jobs when the soldiers come home. Working in a garage and adjusting automobile machinery was until recently considered very much of a man's job. Here are two young women working in a Philadelphia garage with quite the expertness of mere man

MRS. VINCENT ASTOR photographed in a happy mood at the Victory Hut, Battery Park, New York, where she is giving her time to serve the boys with goodies on sale at the hut

©International Film Service.

ADMIRAL PEARY in one of the navy seaplanes near Washington preparing to make a flight. He predicted the other day that the polar explorations of the future will be accomplished with the aid of the airplane

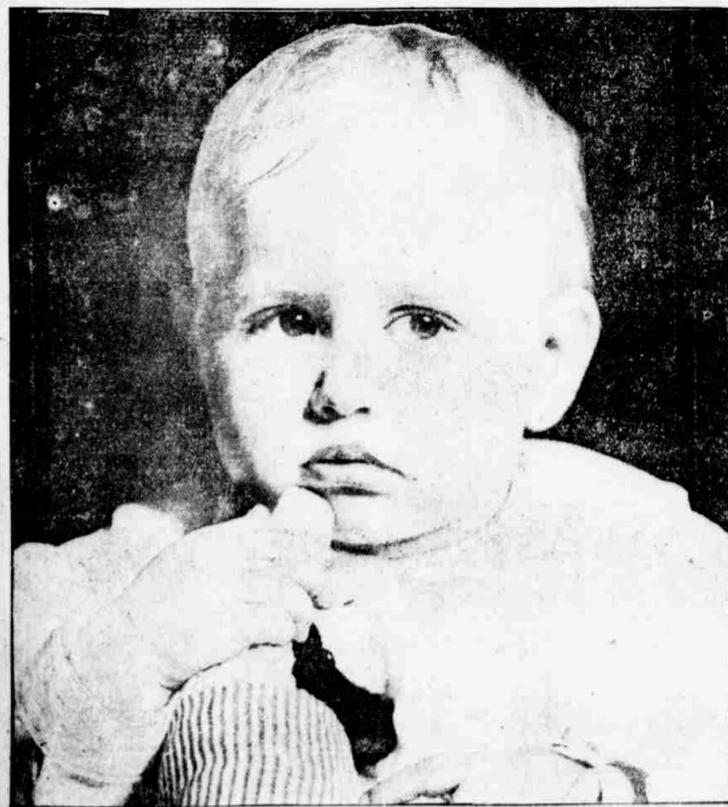

JAMES HARRIS ROGERS, of Hyattsville, Md., is the inventor of an underground radio system by which wireless messages may be sent and received under ground or water without the use of aerials. The invention was adopted by the navy

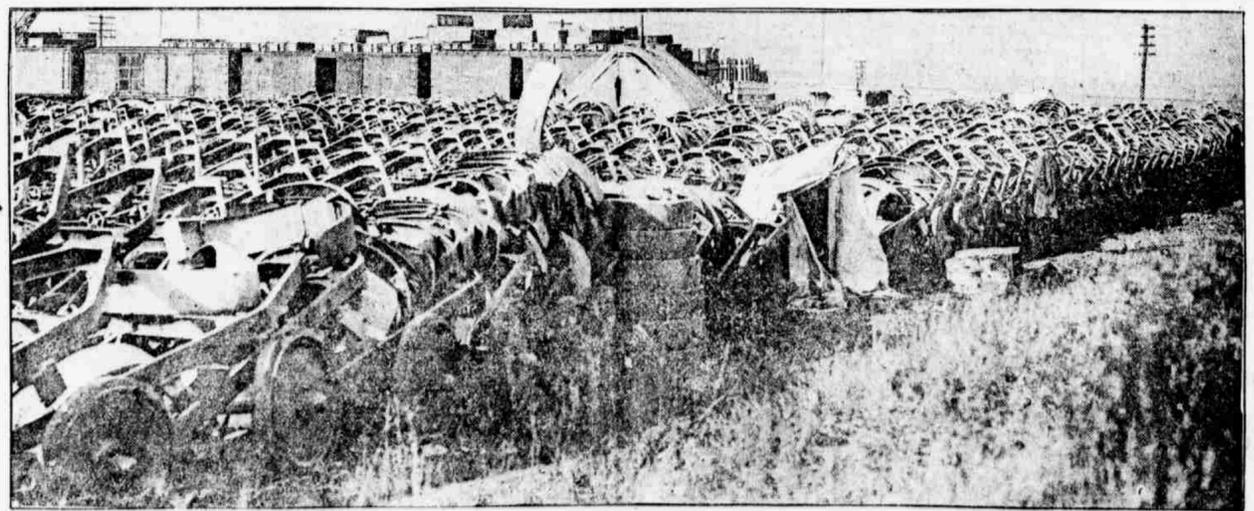

©International Film Service.

MISS GERDA ANDERSEN arriving in New York on the American liner Oscar II, en route for Washington, where she will assume her new post as second secretary of the Danish legation. She previously held a similar post in Petrograd.

THIS TOT OF SO SERIOUS and doubting mien is one of many little ones at the Western Temporary Day Nursery, on Fortieth street, near Bari, where the tiny tots are well looked after while the father or mother is arranging a new home; for many of the babies at the nursery have lost a parent

HUNDREDS OF CHASSIS intended for the American army overseas were ready for shipment to France when the armistice was signed. The chassis are for field kitchen trucks and are stored on a lot at Tioga and D streets, in northeast Philadelphia